NEWS UPDATE!!

A partnership between Dillard University and Brazilian higher education officials will bring between 12 and 20 Brazilian students to Dillard this week to study for the next 18 months. The agreement is part of the Brazilian government's Brazil Scientific Mobility Program, as well as the HBCU-Brazil Alliance, a new initiative spearheaded by President Obama to deepen academic cooperation between Brazilian higher education institutions and American Historically Black Colleges and Universities in the areas of science and technology.

The Office of International Students & Study Abroad Programs would like to welcome our students from around the globe.
