Unless lawmakers change the plan, third through eighth graders in Louisiana will take new multi-state tests next year for the Common Core mathematics and English standards. If you were at that desk, how would you do?

Post your answer in the comments below this story, and come back Tuesday for the results -- and those of our celebrity panel: Dillard University President Walter Kimbrough, Pierre the Pelican, restaurateur Susan Spicer and columnist James Varney of NOLA.com | The Times-Picayune.
